For example, a complaint against a civil servant shall initially be considered a government secret. If it is a suspicious card, only those cases that clearly state evidence, circumstances, and witnesses shall be considered. The reporting of influential persons shall conceal the name and address of the complainant. If the name and address of the complainant are not concealed, the relevant agency shall be notified and the complainant shall be protected as follows: “The commander shall exercise discretion and order appropriately to protect the complainant, witnesses, and persons who provide information in the investigation, so that they do not suffer harm or injustice that may arise from the complaint, being a witness, or providing information.” In cases where the accused person’s name is specified, both the complainant and the accused must be protected because the matter has not yet gone through the fact-finding process and may be considered as a harassment accusation that causes distress and damage. In cases where the complainant states in the petition to conceal or does not wish to disclose the complainant’s name, the agency must not disclose the complainant’s name to the accused agency because the complainant may suffer distress as a result of the complaint.

1. The report of influential persons must conceal the name and address of the complainant.
